GIRL TEACHER IS RESCUED BY DARING FEAT

MAY SAIL TO HUNT NATTOSE

Forecasted for Safety of Yacht Not Provisioned for Long Voyage

"Where is the Nattose?"
Today again, this is the query on many lips, and not only the yachting fraternity, but also the business and professional men of the city, and in fact everyone who is in touch with current events, is speculating on the fate of the little yawl. That something should be done to solve the mystery of her non-appearance is the general sentiment. Just what that something should be, no one is prepared to say, for if the yacht has merely gone out of her reckoning, and picked up one of the other islands instead of Oahu, she will be able to work her way back without assistance. On the other hand, if she has gone to leeward of the entire group, she may be anywhere on the broad Pacific between here and Midway, and to hunt for her on that waste of water would be a hopeless task.

Admiral Cowles stands ready to dispatch the navy tug Naawao on the search. If the yachtsmen can give him any idea of the course which the Nattose expected to follow, or any suggestions as to where to look. If the Nattose isn't sighted from Diamond Head some time today, query and speculation will give way to action, and some definite plan of assistance be mapped out.

If the Nattose is helplessly drifting, or hopelessly lost, the condition of her captain and crew is little short of desperate. She is probably far off the track of regular steamers and sailing vessels, and from all accounts, is none too well provisioned. She has an ample supply of fresh water, but it is possible that something may have happened to the supply tanks, such as put the Hawaii short of water for the last two days of her run.

"Nattose left in a sort of haphazard way that yachtsmen didn't think at all safe or shipshape," said a member of the Hawaii's crew today. "All the way down the coast from Victoria the grub consisted of salt horse and canned stuff, and even at San Pedro before the start Captain Ashe paid little attention to his supplies, and didn't take on any fresh meat or vegetables. It's possible that he only carried enough stuff for the estimated run, and that if he's out very long his supplies may run short. There didn't seem to be much head or tail about the cruise of the Canadian yacht."

The general supposition is that Captain G. P. Ashe has a faulty chronometer and does not know it. A

HONOLULU READY FOR GLORIOUS 4TH

Fluttering Flags and Bunting City's Attire for Nation's Birthday

EAGLE TO MAKE ITS SCREAM

Program of Festivities Begins with Sunrise Salute and Continues Until Midnight

With the majority of the business houses of the city draped in bunting and displaying flags, American eagles and portraits of "George, the Father of His Country" in bountiful profusion, all is in readiness for the big Fourth of July celebration in which Honolulu will indulge tomorrow morning and ending at midnight or thereabouts.

"Something doing every minute" has been the motto of the Committee, and a glance at the program will show that it has been lived up to, for there is no time allowance for lunch, and spectators of the dashing feats to be performed by the cavalry and artillery during the military tournament will have to line the sidewalks, sandwiches in hand, or wait the brief intermission allowed for dinner in the evening.

The morning hours will be well filled with the big civic parade, with its floats representing the public spirited merchants of the city, the patriotic organizations in line, and the Antiques and Horribles section with its amusing features.

Exercises at Capitol.

Then follows the literary exercises in the Capitol grounds when Walter G. Smith will deliver the oration of the day and Miss Hiro Miyahara, a daughter of America, will read the declaration of independence from a platform decorated by other children of Uncle Sam.

Following the exercises comes the military tournament and the sport program at Kapiolani Park in quick succession, and after dinner, old Punchbowl will break out in a wild volcanic eruption. There will be fireworks on the water front, including the illuminated water parade, and the burning of the warship Kaimiloa. The Indoor Yacht Club dance on the roof garden of the Young Hotel, given in honor of the visiting yachtsmen will bring the eventful day to a close.

Dirigible In Which Vaniman, Honolulu Man, Was Thrown To Terrible Death

The tragic death of Melvin W. Vaniman, formerly of Honolulu, in the sea near Atlantic City, N. J., yesterday is the greatest horror in the history of aviation. Vaniman was a companion of Walter Wellman on the latter's attempt a year ago to fly across the ocean. The Akron, the great dirigible shown above, was the result of that experiment. The photograph above was sent from Atlantic City a few days ago by Vaniman to a friend in Honolulu. The captioned news, while brief, indicates that the immense gas bag exploded, and the five men in the dirigible, including Vaniman's brother, fell a thousand feet into the sea, in sight of Vaniman's horror-stricken family.

WORK PILING UP FOR GOVERNOR FREAR

When Governor Frear arrives home on the Wilhelmina early next week he will find his desk in the government building piled high with a great mass of documents, filled with a seemingly endless array of figures. These consist of the annual reports of the various Territorial officials and departments, and for several weeks Governor Frear will have a plentiful supply of work at hand, reviewing these and preparing his own annual report to the Secretary of the Interior.

The Territory's annual report is due July 1, though it is never ready for shipment to Washington before the latter part of July or the middle of August.

GREAT REGISTER LAW DEFECTIVE?

That the law providing for the Great Register for voters in the Territory may prove defective through its inadequacy on one of two points is the suspicion entertained now by Acting Governor Mott-Smith, who, in his capacity of Secretary of the Territory will begin shortly to prepare for the general election on November 4.

While looking over the election and registration laws this morning he discovered what he believes is a failure to provide for an increase in precincts, where such increase is desired by the division of certain precincts which have acquired dense population.

In a cursory review of the law creating the Great Register, he says the registration clerk is not authorized to make any change in his books in precincts already formed.

Another statute permits the Governor to create new districts sixty days prior to election, but if an old precinct is split into two parts, there is no provision, he says, stating how the clerk shall handle those voters who registered in the old precinct before the division was made.

This promises to become a pertinent question within the next few weeks as several petitions for the division of precincts in the city have been filed recently.

Mott-Smith says that if divisions cannot be made in some instances it will result in serious congestion at some of the polls and cause considerable delay in the voting and counting of ballots.

Following the arrival of Governor Frear, who is now en route to Honolulu from San Francisco, Mott-Smith will return to his office as Secretary of the Territory and be able to give more attention to the preparation of the election proclamation and the study of the laws governing the election.

No doubt there are wives who drive their husbands to drink, and there are other husbands who would like to have such wives.

2 MORTGAGES GIVEN TOTAL $3,000,000

Two mortgages recorded in one day for a total of $3,000,000, bearing stamp duties that bring $6887 to the revenue of the Territory, have an aspect of big business.

There was filed in the Registry of Conveyances on July 1 a trust mortgage of the Honolulu Gas Company, Limited, to the Henry Waterhouse Trust Company, Limited, and Edward I. Spaulding, to secure the payment of the principal and interest of an authorized issue of bonds of an aggregate amount of not exceeding one million dollars par value at any one time outstanding.

The present bond issue is for $300,000 to cover unfunded indebtedness and to provide for the improvement and extension of the gas company's plant. Of the remainder of the million $200,000 is to refund at five per cent an outstanding issue of six per cent bonds, the balance of $500,000 to be issued from time to time, under conditions fully set forth in the mortgage.

MRS. DOWDELL OF MAUI KILLED IN BAD RUNAWAY

(Special Star-Bulletin Wireless.)
WAILUKU, July 3.—Thrown from her carriage at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Samuel R. Dowdell, wife of the architect of Paia, was so badly injured that she died at 11 o'clock last night.

Mrs. Dowdell, in company with Miss Durling, was driving when the horse became fractious and bolted. Both women were hurled from the carriage. Mrs. Dowdell struck on her head and received other injuries. She died at 11 o'clock, medical skill doing no good. The funeral will be held at 3:30 o'clock today.

Miss Durling miraculously escaped injury.

RESCUERS BEAR MISS HENRY IN ON STRETCHER

Shaw, One of Rescue Party, Tells Thrilling Tale of Wanderings

(Special Correspondence, Star-Bulletin.)
(Special to the Star-Bulletin.)
J. P. COOKE'S RESIDENCE, KAPAPAU, 2:45 p. m.—Born on a stretcher carried by members of the rescue party, under Dr. Scudder, which found her, Miss Ruth Henry, the teacher who was injured by a fall over a precipice while she with four companions were lost on the mountains, arrived here a few minutes ago and is now the recipient of the best of care.

Aside from the bruises and cuts about her face and head sustained in her fall, Miss Henry is in better condition than when she was found.

For three nights, in company with Harold Robinson, who watched over her, Miss Henry has been lying at the head of a series of waterfalls in the jungle.

They were rescued yesterday afternoon by Dr. Scudder and his party, who spent the night there on account of Miss Henry's then serious condition. Her removal from the scene of the accident was accomplished this morning by a native, who placed her on his back and lowered himself down two drops of waterfalls. She was then placed on a stretcher, which was preceded by a detachment of army engineers, who cut a trail through the jungle for rescuers and rescued.

The Rescued Women.

Both young women, whose adventures and perils in the past seventy-two hours make the average dimensions here look like a comedy, will remain at the residence of Mr. Cooke at Kapiolani until the day of August 15, as was originally intended. The three men in the party are expected to arrive in town some time tomorrow. With the return of the rescuers, who have been struggling in all morning by two and threes, comes a series of thrilling tales that are only less hair-raising than the actual adventures themselves.

Dr. Scudder will remain at Mr. Cooke's residence pending Miss Henry's complete recovery and he has already sent for Dr. Baldwin to come post haste and minister to the suffering of the young woman. Miss Henry is in a serious condition. Her fall which occurred Saturday night bruised her severely and she incurred three deep scalp wounds, placing her in a condition bordering upon nervous prostration. Three nights' exposure to the elements and the horrible fears which she could not dismiss from her mind that perhaps she might never be rescued, have left the young woman in a precarious state and it will only be by careful medical attendance and complete rest that she will recover her original robust state of health.

FORCES CHANGE IN WHARF PLAN

An intimation that the Federal Government would prevent the construction of the new $100,000 wharf in Kaho Bay, at Hilo, unless present plans were modified, was contained in a letter from Major William P. Wooten, chief engineer officer of the Department of Hawaii, read at the meeting of the Board of Harbor Commissioners this afternoon.

He stated that the plans prepared by the Board for the proposed wharf would be likely to check navigation to the small wharf on the military reservation near by, and that such stoppage would not be tolerated. The plans contemplate dredging along the outer side of the Territorial pier and filling in on the opposite side. The Federal Government's wharf, almost directly opposite, would thus be allowed only a narrow channel, which, Major Wooten explains, would probably fill in from the dirt used along the one side of the wharf.

Chairman Campbell explained to the Commissioners that in a conference with the engineers he had devised a plan whereby rip-rap would be used along the outer edge of the fill, thus eliminating the danger of its washing toward the Government pier. The Commission voted to adopt this idea, and the plan will be accepted by Major Wooten.

A slight puff will send a feather-brained man up in the air.

Assistant Secretary Andrews, Resigning, Makes Sensational Charges

(Associated Press Cable)
WASHINGTON, D. C., July 3.—A. P. Andrews, assistant secretary of the treasury, has resigned in the midst of a storm that has stirred official Washington to its depths.

In resigning, Andrews makes a violent attack on Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh. He declares "his (MacVeagh's) astounding capacity for procrastination, his incapacity for decision, his peculiar mode of suspension and aversion to certain men" render him unfit to occupy the cabinet position he holds.

In a letter to President Taft, Andrews openly charges that the condition of the Treasury Department is a matter of grave concern to all having business therewith.

In reply to these attacks, President Taft made a statement today saying that Andrews' resignation was requested because of insubordination.

He believes, he declares, that Wilson will poll more Republican votes than any other possible Democratic candidate.

FAMED HIGH FINANCE FUGITIVE SOUGHT HERE BY U. S. OFFICIALS

Geo. C. Hodges, Who Played "Blackie Daw" to De Larm's "J. Rufus Wallingford", Believed to Be Hiding in the Islands.

After a career in high and low finance rivaling the heroes of up-to-date fiction, George C. Hodges is now a fugitive from justice, wanted by the federal officials and the police of half a dozen coast cities, and believed to be in hiding in the Hawaiian Islands.

Word that the federal officials are on the hunt for Hodges has come by a round about way to a Honolulu man, and a quiet search of the islands is expected. Local federal authorities say they have heard nothing of the matter.

Hodges was the companion and business associate of W. E. DeLarm, a promoter whose operations in daring and success are reminiscent of J. Rufus Wallingford at his best. DeLarm's story has been the sensation of the Northwest since last January, when his million-dollar Columbia River Orchard Company collapsed and its promoters fled from Seattle, scattering in all directions. DeLarm and Hodges were the chief operators in the concern, it was alleged others being A. J. Biehl, H. H. Humphrey, and R. H. MacWhorter. These last three, after indictment by a grand jury, were arrested, furnished bail and were released to await trial. DeLarm and Hodges dropped from sight.

DeLarm's Finish.

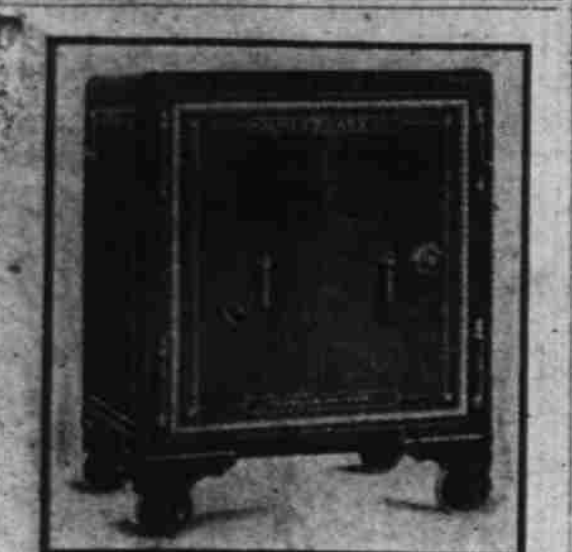

They had been operating in Seattle, Portland, Bellingham and Everett, Wash., and in cities farther south. From Seattle DeLarm was traced to Portland and then to San Mateo, Cal. Next he was heard of in San Francisco and when the federal sleuths got on his trail, he jumped to Mexico. Then DeLarm dropped out of sight, and months later was found dying, of pneumonia and a paralytic stroke, at a hospital at Placerville, Cal. He died on June 16 and with his death another clue of the whereabouts of Hodges was lost.

The Columbia River Orchard company was in a high finance scheme which developed amazing intricacies when its bottom collapsed and the postoffice inspectors, U. S. district attorney's office and other authorities began to examine its workings. DeLarm and Hodges claimed to have a large tract of land in Eastern Washington which they had cut up into orchard acreage. They launched an elaborate publicity campaign, selling stocks, bonds, and the land itself, water rights, and everything that sounded plausible. Four million dollars is alleged to be involved in the various deals, the putting through of which
